

THE ONE BITE REPORT

All the news that's fit to start — Full PPR Edition

WEEK 4 PREVIEW · ISSUE NO. 4 · PROJECTIONS ARE SLEEPER'S OWN PREGAME NUMBERS

Standings Entering Week 4

3-0: Raymond49, Whodatjuan   2-1: Caullyn, Jer13, Karrobi, NathanR918   1-2: 00sef, Zaniac18, hogsett7, JLozoya
0-3: mattware1199, satiro

This Week at a Glance

| Matchup                              | Projected Score        | Favorite                |
|--------------------------------------|------------------------|-------------------------|
| Whodatjuan (3-0) vs. JLozoya (1-2)   | 142.03 — 94.47  | Whodatjuan, 82%         |
| mattware1199 (0-3) vs. Jer13 (2-1)   | 127.39 — 116.32 | mattware1199, 58%       |
| Zaniac18 (1-2) vs. satiro (0-3)      | 129.16 — 108.64 | Zaniac18, 66%           |
| hogsett7 (1-2) vs. Karrobi (2-1)     | 136.25 — 119.60 | hogsett7, 62%           |
| Raymond49 (3-0) vs. NathanR918 (2-1) | 145.12 — 123.08 | Raymond49, 65%          |
| Caullyn (2-1) vs. 00sef (1-2)        | 139.37 — 137.53 | Caullyn, 51% (pick 'em) |

The Lead Story

Two teams remain unbeaten heading into Week 4, and both are favored again — Raymond49 and Whodatjuan have the two highest projected scores on the board. But the real headline is at the bottom of the standings: mattware1199, still searching for its first win at 0-3, is favored for the first time all season, a 58% pick over a Jer13 squad that hasn't lost since Week 1. And nothing on the slate is closer than Caullyn vs. 00sef — a near-exact coin flip that's the best game on paper this week.

One honest note on the numbers throughout this issue: Sleeper doesn't publish its own win probabilities or spreads outside the app, so the projected scores below are Sleeper's real pregame numbers, but the derived spread and win-odds figures are simple math run on top of them — a for-fun estimate, not an official line.

MARQUEE MATCHUP

Whodatjuan Looks to Make It Four Straight Against a JLozoya Squad Still Finding Its Footing

The One Bite Report — Week 4 Preview

Whodatjuan (3-0) opens as the heaviest favorite of the week, an 82% pick over a JLozoya team that's lost two of its last three. Jaxon Smith-Njigba ("mattityahu") leads the projections at 22.18 after a career-best 35.36 last week, and Kenneth Walker III ("andreas") adds another near-20-point floor at running back. Taylor Shough ("yahweh") doesn't even play until Monday night against Atlanta, giving Whodatjuan a full slate of Sunday production before its last piece is even on the field.

JLozoya's bigger problem isn't the opponent — it's the position. Drew Lock has no clear projection on the board this week, the same quarterback spot that returned a flat 0.00 back in Week 3 when Sam Darnold reclaimed the Seattle job. Christian Watson and Bijan Irving give JLozoya some real upside if things break right, but climbing out of a 94.47 projected total against this opponent is a tall order.

THE LINE

Whodatjuan -47.6

Spread

236.5

Over/Under

82% / 18%

Win Odds

PREDICTION CORNER

Q: Does Whodatjuan's bench outscore JLozoya's entire starting lineup?

Our take: Close. Whodatjuan's projected total alone clears JLozoya's by 47-plus points — a genuine blowout risk unless Lock finds his footing fast.

UNDERDOG WATCH

Still Winless, Still Favored: mattware1199 Gets Its Best Shot Yet

The One Bite Report — Week 4 Preview

For the first time all season, mattware1199 (0-3) is favored to win — a modest 58% over a Jer13 team that's quietly gone 2-1 without much fanfare. The engine is CeeDee Lamb (17.39) and Zay Flowers (19.44), the same receiver duo that's kept mattware1199 competitive in every loss so far. If C.J. Stroud (18.28) gives them anything close to a full game, this is the week the winless streak ends.

Jer13 counters with the single best individual projection in this matchup: Jahmyr Gibbs at 24.27, fresh off a 41.40-point explosion last week that included three touchdowns. That's the swing factor. If Gibbs repeats anywhere near that form, Jer13's floor is high enough to survive mattware1199's receiver corps regardless of what the win probability says.

THE LINE

mattware1199 -11.1

Spread

243.7

Over/Under

58% / 42%

Win Odds

PREDICTION CORNER

Q: Does Jahmyr Gibbs outscore mattware1199's entire receiver corps by himself?

Our take: He'd need a repeat of last week's 41-point outburst — possible, but Gibbs' own projection this week (24.27) suggests something closer to earth.

DIVISIONAL-STYLE CLASH

Zaniac18 Looks to Snap Back Against a Winless satiro Squad

The One Bite Report — Week 4 Preview

Zaniac18 (1-2) is a clear 66% favorite here, built around Patrick Mahomes (“Texas Tech owner,” 21.07) and a Drake London Monday-night piece (16.71) that’s still riding last week’s 28.40-point outburst. Saquon Barkley (“Hit the Quon”) and Josh Warren round out a lineup with real weekly ceiling, even without a true standout at wide receiver beyond London.

satiro (0-3) leans on Dak Prescott (18.33) and a resurgent Chase Brown (17.82) to keep this respectable, but the roster is thinner everywhere else. Getting to 108.64 — let alone past Zaniac18’s 129.16 — likely requires positive game-script bounces most winless teams haven’t been getting this year.

THE LINE

Zaniac18 -20.5

Spread

237.8

Over/Under

66% / 34%

Win Odds

PREDICTION CORNER

Q: Which running back has the better week: Josh Warren or Chase Brown?

Our take: Warren’s projection (14.78) edges Brown’s (17.82) on paper is actually reversed — Brown projects higher, making this the one real toss-up inside an otherwise lopsided matchup.

CEILING VS. FLOOR

hogsett7 Banks on Its Ceiling Against a Streaking Karrrobi Squad

The One Bite Report — Week 4 Preview

hogsett7 (1-2) is favored at 62% despite the worse record, and the reasoning is simple: Brock Bowers projects at 15.73 after a 27.60-point breakout last week, and Christian McCaffrey (“My only hope”) adds another 18-plus-point piece at running back. This is a boom-driven roster hoping its ceiling shows up on the right Sunday.

Karrrobi (2-1) counters with the highest individual projection in the matchup — Lamar Jackson (“Blud”) at 22.75 — plus Derrick Henry (“Kingggggg”) projected for 19.76 of his own. That's a genuine 1-2 punch at the league's most valuable positions, and it's the reason this game projects closer than the win percentage alone suggests: 136.25 to 119.60, a real but not insurmountable gap.

THE LINE

hogsett7 -16.7

Spread

255.8

Over/Under

62% / 38%

Win Odds

PREDICTION CORNER

Q: Lamar Jackson or Christian McCaffrey — whose stat line matters more to the final result?

Our take: McCaffrey's, marginally. hogsett7's whole projected edge runs through him and Bowers combining for over 34 points — lose either and this flips fast.

Unbeaten Raymond49 Meets Its Toughest Test Yet

The One Bite Report — Week 4 Preview

Raymond49 (3-0) is favored again at 65%, but NathanR918 (2-1) is the most dangerous opponent it's faced all year. Bijan Robinson doesn't kick off until Monday night against New Orleans, projected for a team-high 22.07, while Brock Purdy and a healthy receiver room give Raymond49 balance across every position — the same formula that's produced three straight wins, including a 192.08-point explosion in Week 3.

NathanR918 counters with Ja'Marr Chase (18.20) essentially matching Raymond49's top receiver projection outright, and Joe Burrow (18.85) outprojecting Purdy at quarterback. On paper this is the tightest matchup an unbeaten team has faced all season — the gap is real, but it's the smallest gap Raymond49 has seen since Week 1.

THE LINE

Raymond49 -22.0

Spread

268.2

Over/Under

65% / 35%

Win Odds

PREDICTION CORNER

Q: Does Bijan Robinson's Monday-night game single-handedly decide this one?

Our take: It could. His 22.07 projection is the single largest number on Raymond49's side of the board — a quiet Monday for him turns this into a genuine nail-biter.

GAME OF THE WEEK

A Coin Flip at the Top: Caullyn and 00sef Set for the Closest Game on the Board

The One Bite Report — Week 4 Preview

Nothing on the Week 4 slate is closer than this one: Caullyn (2-1) projects for 139.37, 00sef (1-2) for 137.53 — a 51-49 split that's as close to a true pick 'em as the numbers get. Jonathan Taylor (21.29) and a Puka Nacua line (18.85) that's officially carrying an “Out” tag entering the weekend headline Caullyn's side, a real swing factor worth watching before lineups lock.

00sef counters with the highest single projection anywhere in this matchup — Josh Allen at 23.31, himself carrying a questionable tag — plus Kyren Williams providing a steady floor at running back. If both Allen and Nacua's injury designations resolve in opposite directions, this game could swing well outside its projected margin in either direction.

| THE LINE                      |
|-------------------------------|
| Caullyn -1.8Spread |
| 276.9Over/Under    |
| 51% / 49%Win Odds  |

| PREDICTION CORNER                                                                                                                                                                    |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Q: Two questionable/out tags in one matchup — Josh Allen (Q) and Puka Nacua (O). Which one flips this game?                                                                   |
| Our take: Nacua's, if he's ruled out — Caullyn's whole projection assumes his 18.85 is on the field. Allen playing through his own tag is the lower-risk scenario of the two. |

Source: Sleeper app league, matchup, and lineup screens (captured Sept. 29, 2026). Projected scores and player projections are Sleeper's own pregame numbers; spreads, over/unders, and win-odds splits shown in “The Line” are derived from those numbers, not pulled from Sleeper directly. “Prediction Corner” commentary reflects this newsletter's own read, offered for fun, not as advice.